

SIXTY YEARS OF BCM PROBLEMS : AN INDEX

Between January 1950 and December 2009 the British Chess Magazine's 'Problem World' column included more than 5000 'originals', as well as a significant number of compositions previously published elsewhere. Other sections of the magazine have also featured problems. Taken together these constitute a rich resource for any problem connoisseur having access to a significant run of the magazine.

Hunting down problems by a specific composer can, however, be a challenging task. Access to the originals is to be had via annual indexes, though it is to be noted that for one year at least – 1991 – the index has entries for 'Problem World' but none for the names of individual composers. However, in the nature of things not every owner of a back run of the BCM will possess all the relevant indexes. A further difficulty arises from the fact that, in recent years in particular, the annual indexes have originals as their main or even exclusive target. The 1968 index, included in the March 1969 issue, is unusual in its inclusion of entries for 'Quoted Problems', as well as for problems appearing in 'Quotes & Queries'. The 1992 index carried a formal announcement, 'Originals only indexed', thereby establishing a trend which has continued to the present day.

A further deficiency of the annual indexes is that their coverage has in general been restricted to the contents of 'Problem World'. My objective, on the other hand, has been to include entries for all problems published in the magazine between January 1950 and December 2009, whether in 'Problem World', in the 'Fairy Chess' column hosted during the 1950s by Dennison Nixon, in 'Quotes & Queries' (under D.J. Morgan, 1953-1978, Q&Q was a regular source of problem art) or in general articles, obituaries, letters to the editor, etc. An indication of the riches the new approach may have uncovered is to be found in the case of Sam Loyd, three of whose compositions graced the magazine's pages in 1984, but with only one finding its way into the annual index.

In identifying 'problems' as my target category I have followed the Oxford Companion to Chess in defining the genre as 'compositions accompanied by [a] stipulation ... stating that one side is to give mate, or achieve some other aim, in a set number of moves'. Such compositions are distinguished from studies in that the latter do not specify a set number of moves and have 'win' or 'draw' rather than 'mate' as their objective. While most of the problems indexed here follow the traditional pattern ('White to mate in ...') I have included entries for construction tasks such as W.T. Brandhorst's 'position in which all seven of the white pieces have been captured and it is possible to determine on which square each has been captured' (1980, p.431). For studies a separate index is under consideration.

A few other points may be worth making:

A regular feature of 'Problem World' has been the detection of 'anticipations': previously published compositions, from various sources, having so close a kinship with problems published as originals as to undermine the credentials of the latter. In earlier decades many of these anticipations were published in the column, mostly in Forsyth notation, but few if any figure in the annual indexes, an omission which I hope in most cases to have repaired.

Anticipation of another kind is to be found in the case of problems first published in 'Problem World' and afterwards honoured with awards in BCM competitions. Where such problems appear twice in the column (the second time often in Forsyth notation) I have felt no hesitation over the provision of a second index entry, since such problems clearly deserve to be remembered but in some cases the index user may not possess the issue of the magazine in which they first appeared.

Until the nineties, solutions to each month's problems were published two or three months after their appearance, with comments from solvers appended. I have supplied index entries for these solutions only in those cases where a significant discovery has been made (an example is Claude Goumondy's No.11956, published in a misprinted version in March 1984 with a correction in June of the same year). In these cases I have flagged the discovery with a 'see also p...' note. In addition, problems published in good faith but afterwards discovered to be cooked have this fact recorded, with a note as to the page on which the discovery is to be found.

'Problem World' has changed markedly over the years, both in respect of the numbers of problems printed and in the treatment of each month's problems. The former point can be demonstrated via a review of the numbers of composers whose names appear in the BCM's annual indexes: 129 in 1950, 133 in 1970, 37 in 1992, a mere 16 in 2008. In November 1993 the column's then editor John Beasley lamented 'a recent slackening in the flood of originals', and it would seem that this trend may have continued, as may a decline in solver participation (a note in December 1989 carried the distressing message 'We seem to be losing solvers faster than we're gaining them'). Since 1995 'Problem World' has appeared only six times per year, alternating with the 'Endgame Studies' column. For problemists and studies enthusiasts alike, this will hardly have been a happy development, and it is to be hoped that the appearance of this index, despite its clear limitations (in particular the lack of any coverage of problems published during the magazine's first seven decades), may bring to subscribers' notice the problemistic treasure house to be found in its pages.
